Women's Aid has been working to stop domestic violence against women and children since 1974. We do this by:

1. Making women and children safer;
2. Supporting women;
3. Working for justice and social change; and
4. Providing hope.

AIMS

Women's Aid aims to:

1. Provide a range of high quality, specialised, integrated domestic violence services that empower women and maximise their own and their children's safety.
2. Use our expertise and experience to promote the protection and welfare of children and teenagers living with or at risk of domestic violence.
3. To be a Centre of Excellence for Training and Development of professional and organisational responses to women and children experiencing domestic violence.
4. To bring the concerns, experiences and needs of women and children experiencing domestic violence and of the organisations that support them to legislation and policy making fora.
5. To strategically communicate the reality of domestic violence, its cost to women, children and the community and the need and opportunities for change.
6. To be an informed organisation responsive to the needs and interests of women and children experiencing domestic violence and those who work to stop domestic violence.

Our Direct Services to women underpin and inform all of our work to stop domestic violence.
